Nurturing your donor base is important

With fewer individuals donating to charitable organizations, the need to engage and nurture your donor base is more important than ever.

The best place to raise additional funds is often your existing donor base. Staying connected to your donors and communicating your impact can help ensure your organization remains top of mind when those individuals or organizations budget for their charitable contributions.

Household percentage of giving has decreased in each age group

How to become a data-driven strategist

Fewer donors remain, but their giving has increased. Relationships Matter.

Over the same period that total individual donors declined, their average donation size increased. Another trend in the U.S. has been wealth concentration, and “the rate of decline in the number of low-dollar donors has an extremely strong correlation with indicators of economic inequality and insecurity.”<sup>1</sup>

Nonprofits must invest more time and effort into relationships with key donors. Charities should create specific, measurable objectives around key donor engagement to ensure they remain in the top three philanthropic priorities of their donors.<sup>2</sup>

Those donating are giving more, as average donation size has increased since 2002<sup>3</sup>

Most donors research organizations before giving

It takes more transparency and better communication to earn a donor's trust.

Thanks to the internet, prospective donors enjoy easy access to research that helps them select gift recipients. Donors care deeply about finding organizations that best reflect their values and priorities. They want evidence of solid financial stewardship and strong mission impact. If they can't easily understand your organization's story, their donations may go somewhere else.

Prior to making contributions, donors consider the following factors:

A Guide to Philanthropy in the U.S. 8th Edition, 2019 CCS Fundraising

Account for generational differences

Two generations make roughly two-thirds of donations.

Know the ages of your current and prospective donors so you can create successful fundraising strategies. While the total amount of giving is highest in the Baby Boomer generation, the percent of individuals who donate is highest in the Silent Generation.

The Baby Boomers also have the largest number of donors of any generation by far. The average giving per person trends down from the oldest generation to the youngest. Millennials divide their giving among fewer nonprofit organizations while the Silent Generation gives to the highest average number of charities.

	% THAT GAVE	NUMBER OF DONORS	AVERAGE GIVING PER PERSON	AVERAGE NUMBER OF CHARITIES	TOTAL GIVING
SILENT GENERATION	78%	23.5M	$1,235	6.3	$29.0B
BABY BOOMERS	75%	55.3M	$1,061	4.2	$58.6B
GENERATION X	55%	35.8M	$921	3.8	$32.9B
MILLENNIALS	51%	34.1M	$591	3.5	$20.1B
GENERATION Z	44%	9.3M	$341	4.6	$3.2B

Nearly 2 in 3 charitable dollars came from Baby Boomers and Generation X.

Map communications to generational differences

You won't reach the Silent Generation through the same channels as Millennials.

As you plan your communication strategy, keep this chart in mind and map your communication styles onto it. For example, the Silent Generation still appreciates direct mail communications while Millennials and Generation Z will rarely respond to it. You can reach Millennials and Generation Z more effectively through social media and mobile campaigns. Your website is your most important fundraising communication tool because websites are popular across every generation.

What donors want (and don't want) from nonprofits

Results from two recent donor surveys present a clear vision of what donors want when it comes to fundraising and stewardship—and what they don't want.

Whether it's saving a stamp by sending thank you emails or reducing overhead costs, donors expect excellent stewardship over the hard-earned dollars they donate. They also want to see a compelling case for each mission and proof that charities can affect positive outcomes.

Donors want nonprofit organizations to:

- Thank donors by email (69%)<sup>4</sup>
- Accept credit card payments (54%)<sup>4</sup>
- Make a compelling case of extraordinary need (38%)<sup>5</sup>
- Reduce overhead costs (21%)<sup>5</sup>
- Offer matching gifts (19%)<sup>5</sup>
- Not send an excessive number of appeals (19%)<sup>5</sup>

Stop sending small gifts

- Donors want nonprofits to stop sending unwanted trinkets (28%)<sup>5</sup>
- Donors are NOT any more likely to give after receiving a gift (80%)<sup>5</sup>
- Donors view these trinket gifts as a waste of money (68%)<sup>4</sup>

Storytelling best practice #1

Help donors connect emotionally with your mission

Share your vision

Cast the vision quickly with powerful images that grab attention, connect with potential donors, and clearly highlight your mission. Images can resonate with donors on an immediate, emotional level. When you see this Koala in the middle of a burnt forest, you immediately feel its need and understand World Wildlife Fund's mission.

Storytelling best practice #2

Make them remember you and your mission

Share your brand

Your brand helps donors remember your organization and mission. This translates to greater responsiveness to your campaigns and your needs. Make messaging and branding a primary part of your strategic plan and integrate your brand into all of your communications. The tagline and image on the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital website immediately tells you what this organization dedicates itself to every day. Who would not want to be a part of that brand?

Your website and donor communications should reflect your brand.

Storytelling best practice #3

Bring donors into your story

Communicate your story

Your brand, images, website, messaging—everything should work together and draw your donors into a deeper connection with your mission. Finding the best way to communicate your mission, priorities, and impact are critical elements to telling your story well.

Storytelling best practice #4

Reach out to expand your donor base

Expand your reach

Be sure that your website and donation forms are mobile-friendly. Make it easy for prospective donors to learn more and to give. Leverage social media in all your campaigns by planning and scheduling posts in advance. Include hashtags to increase reach and visuals to drive more traffic to your website. Engage donors with interactive content such as polls or asking for them to share stories.

Your website, social media, and development campaigns should make it easy to give.

Strengthening your story

Transparency matters

Donors care deeply about your return on mission.

The top question on most donor's minds: How much of my money will go to programs? If you can't do the most good with their money, they'd prefer to give it to another charity. Clearly communicate your priorities and demonstrate your progress. Performance data and metrics provide the support for your story by showing impact, accountability and a laser-focus on mission success.

On the charity: water website, donors learn that 100% of donations go to programs (private funding covers administrative expenses) and that over 11 million people have benefitted from clean, safe water in 28 countries.

The screenshot shows the charity: water website header with a 'DONATE' button. Below the header are three navigation cards: 'Learn about Our Approach' (with an image of hands), 'Learn about Our Solutions' (with an image of a person in a green jumpsuit), and 'Learn about Our Partners' (with an image of a man in a yellow hard hat). The main section is titled 'Our Progress' and includes a paragraph: 'We're passionate about solving the water crisis in our lifetime, using 100% of all public donations to fund water projects, and proving where every dollar goes with photos and GPS coordinates. Here's the progress we've made since we started working in 2006.' Below this is a metrics table:

51,438 Water projects funded	11,152,945 People will get clean water	37 Local partners	28 Countries
--	--	-----------------------------	------------------------

At the bottom of the metrics section is a blue button that says 'SEE OUR COMPLETED PROJECTS'.

Strengthening your story

Data and metrics elevate your story

Whatever your mission, define the metrics that best support impact and stewardship and measure them. Build them into your story. Highlight them, strengthen them, and share them. Reinforce performance measurement and transparency until metrics become part of your organization's culture.

Start by linking metrics to your mission

- Meals served: Cost per meal served
- Patients seen: Cost per patient seen per practice area
- Reading levels achieved: Cost per reading level achieved per child
- Animals adopted: Cost per animal per day
- Your mission: What's the key metric for your mission?

This powerful tracking and measurement will enable you to be more transparent and provide the proof and accountability donors desire.

Demonstrating impact

Conclusion

Shine a light on your mission and impact

Donors want to know more about the nonprofit organizations they give to so they can feel good about their contribution to your cause. It's your job to tell them your story in a compelling and urgent way.

To encourage more giving, nonprofits need to elevate their ability to tell their stories by learning to identify, track, and measure the performance indicators that tie directly to mission impact. Donors want to know that you're getting more for their dollars than other organizations might. And they want to be drawn into your story—to care about the people and values you serve.

Consider investments in infrastructure that supports fundraising, including donor databases and donor management solutions, as well as cloud accounting and financial management solutions that help you demonstrate financial performance, efficiency, and outcomes.
